awarded to Camp Fire girls earning them in homemaking, outdoor work, nature study, business and citizenship, one wonders when the Camp Fire girl can find time to dance. But she does, for there are also honers for dancing.

The Camp Fire girl not only knows how to dance the waltz and the prettler of the modern dances-for the Camp Fire girl is the modern girlbut she can do the French Reel, Virginia Reel, Pop Goes the Weasel and Gottland's Quadrille and a host of others, that mothers and grandmothers enjoyed before them.

Certain other honors are given to girls who attempt and accomplish the extremely difficult task of teaching a boy to dance any five dances, including the old-fashioned kind, the simple waltz and fox trot of today. It's not an easy thing, especially when one's brother does not understand his sister's ulterior motive in trying to show him a short cut to grace.

The Camp Fire girl must not only know how to dance, in accordance with one part of her creed, which says. "Seek Beauty," but must know how to make gruel for a sick person; take care of a baby; be able to swim; blaze Teaching the waltz to a Camp Fire

The Green Pea Pirates

By Peter B. Kyne

Capt. Phineas P. Scraggs was brought up around the San Francisco docks and from mess boy has risen to the ownership of the steamer Maggie. Scraggs found it difficult to secure a crew, as each inspection of the ship was supposed to be its last. Adelbert P. Gibney is skipper. Nobody but Scraggs would hire him, on account of his erratic nature, and a motie; crew makes up the ancient Exactly three weeks from the date of the naval battle which took place off the Coronadlo Islands, and where by Mr. Gibney became commodore and managing owner of the erstwhile Mexican coast patrol schooner Reina Maria, that vessel sailed out of the harbor of Panama completely rejuvenated. Not a scar, on her shapely lines gave evidence of the sanguinary engagement through which she had passed.

Mr. Gibney had her painted a creamy white with a dark blue waterline. She had had her bottom cleanswages. But there's tons of black

Mr. Gibney had her painted a creamy white with a dark blue waterline. She had had her bottom cleaned and scraped and the copper sheathing overhauled and patched up. Her sails had been overhauled, inrpected, and repaired wherever necessary, and in order to be on the safe side. Mr. Gibney, upon motion duly made by him and seconded by McGuffey (to whom the seconding of the Gibney motions had developed into a habit), purchased an extra suit of new sails. The engines were overhauled by the faithful McGuffey and a large store of distillate stored in the hold. Captain Scraggs, with his old-time aversion to expense, made a motion (which was seconded by McGuffey before he had taken time to consider its import) providing for the sabolition of the office of chief engineer while the Maggie II was under sail, at which time thec hief ex-officio was to hold himself under the orders of the deck department if necessary. Mr.
Gibney approved the measure and it went into effect. Only on entering or leaving a port, or in case of chase by an enemy, were the engines to be extremely saving of his distillate.
Mr. Gibney made a splendid job of changing the vessel's name, and as she chugged lazily out of Panama bay and lifted to the long ground-swell of the Pacific, it is doubtful if even her late Mexican commander would have recognized her. She was indeed a beautiful craft, and Commodore Gibney's heart swelled with pride as he stood aft, conning the man at the wheel, and locked her over. It seemreflected how he had trained the guin of the old Maggie on her that day off

MODERN SUBMARINE IS BUILT IN CONN.

S-51, Navy's Latest Under-sea Fighter, Launched in Bridgeport.

Washington, Nov. 23—The United States has taken another step forward in submarine construction with the launching of the S-51, the navy's latest undersea fighter, by the Lake Torpedo Boat Co. at Bridgeport, Conn.

4-Inch Gun Mounted
One of the improvements aboard the S-51 is the mounting of her four-tinch gun and the readiness with which it can be brought into action as the submarine leaves the depths of the sea and rises to the surface to strike an enemy.

Just behind the gun in the wall of the conning tower is a hatchway. Through this the gun crew can leap to their firing posts as the ship rises from the waves, jumping into position while the deck is still awash. Ammunition lockers in the wall of the conning tower can be thrown open to supply charges for the gun up to the time the vessel is riding free on the surface and the ammunition hoist begins to work. A half-dozen four-inch shells can be thrown from the gun before the submarine has risen far enough from the sea to present a possible target for any enemy vessel. In addition to her four-inch gun, the S-51 carries five 21-inch torpedo tubes, four forward and one in the stern.

Has Undersea Wireless

The S-51 equipped with undersea wireless. Her radio system permits her to send and receive messages while submerged. She mainains sight contact with the world above the waves through three periscopes. One of these has its eye-piece in the conning tower where the operator, mounted on a platform, rides up and down to take observations at various heights. The eye-pieces of the two other periscopes are in the control other periscopes are in the control Two electric motors drive the S-51 when she is submerged, and on the surface she is propelled by two Susch-Sulzer-Deisel engines, rated at 950 brake horse power each.

The new submarine is double-hulled The new submarine is double-nutred and is regarded by naval construc-tors as embracing the last word in submarine construction. She is de-signed to withstand with safety sub-mergence to a depth of 200 feet. Johnny Cake Marches to Rescue

Most of the shipment was made in the form of corn meal, to save space and freight charges. Among the relief personnel in the City of Alexandropol, where twenty thousand children are housed in American orphanages and where thousands more are reported starving on the streets, was a daughter of the "Old Dominion." It was she, with memories of a chubby childhood, who introduced Johnny to her young charges.

International Taste

As a result of that one shipment of corn meal the relief director for the entire Transcaucasian district, informed relief officials at New York Headquarters that several hundred ragged, hunger-shrunken tots, none over five, were admitted to orphanages in Alexandropoi and Erivan, where lack of sufficient supplies had hitherto kept them out.

"But saving several hundred lives was not all that Johnny has accomplished," the director reports. "He also demonstrated that the tastes of childhood are international. Never has a Virginia pickaninny swallowed picces of Jöhnny Cake with more visible astisfaction than that which showed on the faces of these Armenian waifs, when they had their first taste of it."
